Fundação Universidade Federal de Mato Grosso do Sul (Federal University of Mato Grosso do Sul) (UFMS), a multicampus university, has campuses in Campo Grande, and in nine towns in the State of Mato Grosso do Sul.
UFMS had its origin in 1962 with the creation of the Campo Grande School of Dentistry. In September 1969, it became the State University of Mato Grosso (UEMT) based in Campo Grande, by merging the Institutes of Campo Grande, Corumbá and Três Lagoas. In 1970, the Education centers of Aquidauana and Dourados were created and merged into it. In July 1979, by Federal Law nº 6674, its federalization was completed.

Regional, national and international cooperation

UFMS is committed to develop, disseminate and socialize of knowledge through teaching, research, inovation, extension and provision of services and to promote the full and permanent education of citizens, preparing them so that they can intervene and act dynamically in the local, regional, national and international process of development.
The institution also seeks to consolidate its social commitment with the population of Mato Grosso do Sul, generating knowledge geared to the regional reality and highlighting the need to expand vocational training in social-demographic and political context. It participates actively in the preservation of natural resources from the Mato Grosso do Sul environment, especially wildlife and the Pantanal flora and Cerrado, as well as developing projects that seek to other aspects of their identity, such as dealing with indigenous communities and other so-called minorities.
In addition to its physical presence in 10 cities in the state of Mato Grosso do Sul, University has contributed to enhance the state and the Midwest region through research, teaching, and extension projects, provision of services and the training of more than 70 thousand professionals and opinion makers.
Currently UFMS has over 24,000 enrolled students. It offers 115 undergraduate programs, 68 graduate programs.

International relations

UFMS develops actions aimed at its internationalization, and various scientific and technical cooperation agreements were signed with world-class universities in several areas of knowledge. The University encourages international mobility of undergraduate and graduate students, teachers and technicians with European, Asian and American institutions.
